February 6.
The report from the American committee.
Lord John Cavendish moved to recommit the proposed address which had been agreed to in the committee. He strongly recommended the reconsideration of a measure which he deemed fraught with so much mischief. Commented on the proposed address; thought it improper to assert that a rebellion exists; mentioned the insecurity created by the act for changing the government of Massachusetts Bay; said the inhabitants knew not for a moment under what government they lived. His head and heart combined to deprecate the horrors of civil war, necessarily involving a foreign one also with the combined forces of very powerful nations. He represented the jealousy of our neighbours, from their disgrace and our glory in the last war. If the Americans should hear of our having declared them rebels, and that more force is coming, may they not determine rather to attack a part, than wait for the whole? A small rather than a greater number? He stated very clearly and justly our domestic situation, our state with the colonies and with foreign powers. He called the attention of the House to the

Margaret Higgsが炭鉱での労働について 上院で行った証言

No. 233. Margaret Higgs, 17 years old, putter :

45 On short shifts I work from eight in the morning till six at night; on long ones until 10 at night : occasionally we work all night. When at night-work, from six at night till eight and ten in the morning.

Only bread is taken below; and the only rests we have are those we have to wait upon the men for while picking the coal.

50 My employment, after reaching the wall-face, is to fill a bagie, or slype, with $2\frac{1}{2}$ to 3 cwt. of coal. I then hook it on to my chain, and drag it through the seam, which is 26 to 28 inches high, till I get to the main-road—a good distance, probably 200 to 400 yards. The pavement I drag over is wet, and I am obliged at all times to crawl on hands and feet with my bagie hung to the chain and ropes.

55 I turn the contents of the bagies into the carts till they are filled; and then run them upon the ironrails to the shaft, a distance of 400 to 500 yards.

It is sad sweating and sore fatiguing work, and frequently maims the women. My left hand is short of a finger, which laid me idle four months.

[Reads and writes. Very ill-informed. Is a fine personable woman, above the middle stature and rather stout.

60 It is almost incredible to believe that human beings can submit to such employment, crawling on hands and knees, harnessed like horses, over soft slushy floors more difficult than dragging the same weights through our lowest common-sewers, and more difficult in consequence of the inclination, which is frequently one in three to one in six.]

App. 747. Mr. John Stuart Mill. Sig. 1521. 8501. The humble Petition of the Undersigned,
Sheweth,
That it having been expressly laid down by high authorities that the possession of property in this country carries with it the right to vote in the election of representatives in Parliament, it is an evident anomaly that some holders of property are allowed to use this right, while others, forming no less a constituent part of the nation, and equally qualified by law to hold property, are not able to exercise this privilege.
That the participation of women in the Government is consistent with the principles of the British Constitution, inasmuch as women in these islands have always been held capable of sovereignty, and women are eligible for various public offices.
Your Petitioners therefore humbly pray your honourable House to consider the expediency of providing for the representation of all householders, without distinction of sex, who possess such property or rental qualification as your honourable House may determine.
And your Petitioners will ever pray.

App. 475. Mr. Sharman Crawford. Sig. 7,000. 5289. The Petition of the undersigned Mill Operatives and others, agreed to at a public meeting held in Belfast, on Tuesday, the tenth day of March, 1846,
Humbly sheweth,
That the present hours of factory labour are injurious to health, and preclude the opportunities of mental improvement.
That many of your Petitioners are compelled to work from twelve to thirteen hours per day, in heated and badly ventilated rooms; and that the sudden transition from such places to the open air tends to undermine the health, and is the cause of many fatal diseases.
Your Petitioners further submit to the consideration of your honourable House that, from the lengthened hours of factory labour, they are unable to avail themselves of any opportunities for self-cultivation; and, from the want of early education, they are forced to spend their lives in ignorance.
That those who can read are little disposed to do so after the fatigues of the day, when the physical energies have become weakened by over-exertion.
Your Petitioners further submit, that the Manchester Association of Wholesale Warehousemen for the Protection of Trade.

App. 1659. Mr. Bright. Sig. 63.
15,870. The humble Petition of the undersigned Members of the Manchester Association of Wholesale Warehousemen for the Protection of Trade,
Sheweth,
That the Bill for the extension of the jurisdiction of county courts to sums not exceeding £50 is now returned to your honourable House, amended by the right honourable the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, by the insertion of a clause giving concurrent jurisdiction to the courts at Westminster in all cases where the sums sought to be recovered exceed £20.
That your Petitioners are wholesale tradesmen, whose debts are of necessity spread over the whole country, and that, if compelled to resort to the proposed county courts, they will be subjected to the annoyance, inconvenience, and expense of sending to a distance their books, principal clerks, warehousemen, and porters, in order to prove the justice of their demands.
That the proposed Bill without such concurrent jurisdiction may be beneficial to retail tradesmen, and those parties who reside in the immediate neighbourhood of each other, but will be very inconvenient and oppressive to your Petitioners.
